PROJECT TITLE: Formative Evaluation of Antimicrobial Resistance and Message Testing Among Sandwich Generation Consumers

PURPOSE AND USE OF COLLECTION: The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is requesting approval for a new generic information collection (gen-IC). The goal of this evaluation is to understand the perceptions of antimicrobial resistance (AR) and associated preventive actions among a priority “sandwich generation” consumer audience as well as evaluate the effectiveness of various AR messages and terms with this audience. This data collection builds on existing formative and concept testing evaluations to fill knowledge gaps and validate approaches for the communications effort. The collection involves a survey and focus groups among a newly defined and focused target audience, which has not previously been a subject of any similar project. The findings will be used to inform both CDC’s current AR communications as well as potential future communications efforts to increase awareness and understanding of AR and drive action to combat it.

DESCRIPTION OF RESPONDENTS: There is one core audience for this project: sandwich generation consumers. These are U.S. adults aged 40-59 who are both a caretaker of a child and of their parent(s).

CERTIFICATION:

I certify the following to be true:

1. The collection is voluntary.
2. The collection is low-burden for respondents and low-cost for the Federal Government.
3. The collection is non-controversial and does not raise issues of concern to other federal agencies.
4. Information gathered will not be used to substantially inform influential policy decisions.
5. The study is not intended to produce results that can be generalized beyond its scope.

To assist review, please answer the following questions:

Personally Identifiable Information:

1. Is personally identifiable information (PII) collected? Yes [] No
2. If Yes, is the information that will be collected included in records that are subject to the Privacy Act of 1974? [] Yes No

Focus group participants will receive a monetary incentive of $75 for their participation. Survey respondents will also be compensated for their willingness to participate in the data collection. Incentive amounts are determined based on a variety of factors including the time that a respondent will dedicate to the response, the difficulty of reaching a given profile of respondent, and the urgency of the response. Such an incentive is a standard practice in the market research industry and helps to ensure efficient recruitment and ultimate participation among the qualified and scheduled participants. The incentive is also intended to offset the cost of personal or professional time taken to participate.
